

Feeling overwhelmed after a disaster?

These can be common reactions to a frightening experience. People react differently. You deserve support—not judgment.

Different feelings. Different people.

Karuna · feeling sad

“I feel low.”

Prakash · feeling worried

“I keep worrying.”

Satya · difficulty sleeping

“I cannot sleep well.”

You may also notice anger, numbness, upsetting memories or trouble concentrating.

Support can start with one small step.

You do not have to tell your story to receive support.

Asha offers company

“We can talk—or sit quietly.”

In a safer place, notice what you can see, hear or feel. Breathe gently if comfortable. Stop if you feel worse.

Karuna and Pasang take a short walk

“Let’s move gently.”

If the place and your health allow, try gentle movement on level, dry ground. Pause when needed; avoid floodwater and unstable routes.

Arun and Prakash choose a task

Choose a safe, manageable activity. Take breaks; do not force yourself. Practical help counts too.

SAFETY FIRST

Follow local warnings. Risks may continue. Do not enter floodwater or damaged buildings.

Do not stop prescribed medicine without professional advice.

MORE HELP

If distress worsens, continues or disrupts daily life, speak with a health worker. You do not need to wait.

URGENT HELP

Thinking about suicide or self-harm, unable to stay safe, or in immediate danger? Seek help now. Ask someone you trust to stay with you. Ask a nearby responder or health worker for urgent help. Do not travel through floodwater.
